Multi-level marketing (MLM)

Overview

In a typical multi-level marketing or network marketing arrangement, individuals associate with a parent company as an independent contractor or franchisee and are compensated based on their sales of products or service, as well as the sales achieved by those they bring into the business. This is like many franchise companies where royalties are paid from the sales of individual franchise operations to the franchisor as well as to an area or region manager.

In a legitimate MLM company, commissions are earned only on sales of the company's products or services. No money may be earned from recruiting alone ("sign-up fees"). If participants are paid primarily from money received from new recruits, then the company is an illegal pyramid or Ponzi scheme. Many pyramid schemes try to present themselves as legitimate MLM businesses.

Genuine MLM businesses operate legitimately in more than 100 other countries, including Australia, New Zealand and all 50 states in the United States. Businesses may use terms like "Affiliate marketing" or "home-based business Franchising". DXN is recognised worldwide as a legitimate MLM, and has a wonderful track record looking after its distributors with Honesty and Integrity.

MLM is now taught in some Universities, and is recommended by many Wealth advisors, including Donald Trump and Robert Kyosaki, as a Must in one's portfolio for future income.

History

The 1980s saw a major shift as companies began managing the stocking and distribution of products as well as commission payments to their members. This allowed members to focus on selling. Today, most MLM companies act as logistics companies that take orders, ship products and calculate and pay commissions.

With the arrival of the Internet, MLM companies have started to go online. Many established MLM companies began to use the Internet to promote their products. At the same time, many other new MLM companies started their businesses using the Internet, which is generally called online MLM.
